

International Media Support Group

Domestic Hostile Environment First Aid Training

Safety training for journalists was traditionally only for crews deploying overseas to war zones. The domestic newsgathering landscape has changed and journalists at all levels are targeted directly and find themselves in dangerous situations. From civil unrest, political protests to natural disasters, this course covers basic and intermediate level domestic HEFAT survival skills any journalist can benefit from knowing.

Core Components

- Threats and Hazards
- Planning
- Violence Against the Media
- Digital Security
- First Aid & Trauma Management
- Media Interface with Police
- Natural Disasters
- Weapons Awareness
- Domestic Operations
- Managers & News Director Duties

Overview

The course is designed to be delivered over two to three consecutive days with minimal breaks and a gradual increase of instructional immersion of the students to the course topics and theory through simulation and class activity.

Each new unit builds off of the next unit with content that expands upon what was already learned. All units have a hands-on skills component and small group activities.

The course content is designed to direct the students' focus to address the ME, WE and US. How does it impact "ME", what about our small team "WE", and how does it impact all of "US", all journalists?

D-HEFAT© Course Delivery Options

20-Hours in Person Class

- Maximum of 16 Students
- Includes two instructors
- Hands on skill simulations & roleplay
- Printed Class Handouts

Bespoke customization available for company specific needs.

Pricing is per class, Flat Rate plus Expense.

Contact Us for Details